Saree plays an important role in Indian culture. Indian women in ancient times used to wear sarees in their houses and at festive occasions. Thus it was an indispensable part of their lifestyle. But with growing western influence, sarees took a backstage and were replaced by gowns and skirts. But now, with the growing popularity of these five and half meter drapes, it has again gained momentum, thanks to our rich culture and designers. Designer sarees are mostly preferred by women because of their use of rich embellishments and wide range of colors.
